California's climate is perfectly suited for growing grapes and producing wine. The wineries located in the state of California, particularly the Napa Valley, are home to some of the best wines in the world. In fact, the state of California makes approximately 90% of the wine produced in the United States. Their vineyards have something for everyone, from sweet to dry and red to white, and visitors at these California wineries will find not just delicious wine but a friendly atmosphere, gorgeous facilities, and breathtaking scenery.

2. Matthiasson Winery

Matthiasson Winery has been named as the Bay Area's winemaker of the year by Food and Wine and The San Francisco Chronicle, nominated for a James Beard Award in 2018 and 2019 for its stellar refined wines and blends. The company, which is helmed by married duo Steve and Jill Klein Matthiasson, is best known for its high-quality white wines, focusing on grape varieties originally cultivated along the Italy-Slovenia border such as Ribolla Gialla, and Tocai Friulano. High-quality red wines are also produced, including traditional Bordeaux and Merlot varieties. Guests can tour the winery each morning and sample the winery's delicious lower-alcohol-content wines, known for acid profiles making them perfect for food pairings.
